Dreams Made Manifest.

TCWL Exclusive Experiences Information + Pricing

I come into the peace of wild things who do not tax their lives with forethought of grief. I come into the presence of still water. And I feel above me the day-blind starts waiting with their light. For a time I rest in the grace of the world, and am free.

A Greeting from TCWL's Stewards

Hello there!

We are Ian + Chel Rowan, the current stewards of Trout Creek Wilderness Lodge. We call this forest and river home, and we welcome the opportunity to share this sacred land with you for your special event.

TCWL hosts purposeful gatherings, ranging from yoga, breathwork, meditation, spiritual ceremonies, healing workshops, foraging experiences – executive offsites and summits, weddings, celebrations of life, spiritual sojourns and seasonal festivals. All of these gatherings imbue the land with a patina of their unique vibrancies and synchronicities. Many people share that they feel a vortex that transcends time here, that they are able to experience a deep sense of connection to nature, and come away renewed and recentered.

The Gathering and Sleeping Spaces have all been designed by Ian's architect father, William Rowan, constructed with wood milled from this forest, and built over years with the labor of family, friends, and volunteers. In this way, TCWL is a communal manifestation that has evolved over generations.

This 200 acres has been stewarded by the Davies/Rowan family since the early 20th century. Thanks to the efforts of Ian and William, the land is now protected by a conservation easement, so the old growth ecosystem will remain intact in perpetuity. Before colonization, this land was the ancestral home of the Molalla indigenous peoples, now members of the Confederated Tribes of the Grand Ronde. The Molalla, meaning "people of the berries," gathered here and called this land home since time immemorial.

As we walk these trails, and gather salal, huckleberry, blackberry, and thimbleberry, as we submerge ourselves in the cyan, turquoise and azure hues of the Molalla River and Trout Creek, swimming with salmon below and eagles and blue herons above, we carry the conversation forward about how we can be allies in the healing of Earth and ourselves – personally, culturally, collectively. We remember our place in the peace of wild things.

We are excited to explore the possibility of holding space here at TCWL for your special event. Let's see how the stars align.

Making dreams manifest,

Ian + Chel Rowan

We look forward to your upcoming visit, and share this Code of Conduct to clearly outline the expectations we have of all guests who come to TCWL. If there are any guidelines to which you cannot agree, please inform us in advance of your visit.

The old growth ecosystem in which TCWL operates is fragile and subject to a conservation easement. Respect for and protection of the forest and waters are paramount values that TCWL operates with, and we expect our guests to behave consciously and respectfully while on the land.

TCWL wants all of its guests to enjoy their time on the land. In order to ensure the best experience for everyone, guests are asked to follow these guidelines:

1. Please remain on wood chip paths around the premises and demarcated hiking paths in the forest. Park vehicles in designated parking spots.
2. Please do not harvest Trillium or other endangered plant species.
3. Please pick up after yourself, and leave no trace wherever you go while you are on the land.
4. Clothing is optional in your private lodging space, when swimming in the river, in remote solitude in the forest, and when soaking or enjoying the sauna at the bath house. Please wear clothes in all other public and communal spaces.
5. Many people come to TCWL to engage in personal spiritual and healing modalities and practices. We ask that you respect the privacy of guests at all times, and maintain confidentiality about your own conduct as well as the conduct of others guests that you might observe. What happens on the land, stays on the land, so to speak.
6. Guests may photograph or videotape the premises for personal use only. Please obtain permission from any other person whose image you capture before posting publicly or on social media. Please contact TCWL if you wish to use images for professional purposes.
7. Children under twelve years of age must be accompanied and closely supervised by an adult.
8. No pets are permitted on the premises.
9. Guests may not enter areas of the premises that are marked private.
